MESSAGE

On the occasion of National Press Day, I extend my heartiest greetings and warm felicitations to the media fraternity of India and my media friends in the state. I hope the occasion will once again prompt us towards our social responsibility towards the people and our nation.

Media, today, is one of the most powerful tools. Its importance in today's world is evident from the fact that it has the power to influence the lives of people in every way. Therefore, those of you who are in this profession have to realize your capability to influence and role in creating a society of well informed people. The media has to play a constructive role. I have my highest regards and appreciation for the media for show casing social issues.

I am sure my friends in the media will continue to maintain the highest professional and ethical standards, defending the principle of the freedom of press, while disseminating fair and accurate information.

With best wishes.
