The Governor of Arunachal Pradesh, Lt Gen K.T. Parnaik, PVSM, UYSM, YSM (Retd.), participated in a plantation programme at Raj Bhavan, Itanagar, on 5th June 2026 to mark World Environment Day. Committed to environmental conservation and sustainable living, the Governor planted a sapling of Maha Neem within the Raj Bhavan premises.

Interacting with Lok Bhavan and Forest Department officials, the Governor emphasized that protecting nature is a collective responsibility and called upon every citizen to actively contribute towards increasing the State's green cover. He particularly stressed the need for extensive plantation drives in urban areas, where rapid development often comes at the cost of natural vegetation. The Governor suggested that for every tree felled, at least ten saplings should be planted and nurtured to maintain ecological balance and safeguard the environment for future generations.

The Governor advised all that tree plantation should become a way of life rather than being confined to occasions such as World Environment Day or Van Mahotsav. He encouraged communities, educational institutions, government departments, and social organizations to incorporate plantation activities into every celebration and public event, transforming each occasion into an opportunity to give back to nature.

Calling for greater public participation, the Governor urged the people of Arunachal Pradesh to combine plantation efforts with cleanliness and environmental awareness drives. He also encouraged citizens to adopt mindful and sustainable practices in their daily lives, including conserving natural resources, reducing waste, and promoting eco-friendly habits.

Describing Arunachal Pradesh as one of India's richest repositories of biodiversity and natural beauty, the Governor appealed to the people to preserve and strengthen this invaluable heritage. He said that the responsibility of protecting the environment rests with every generation and that today's efforts will determine the quality of life enjoyed by future generations.

"Let us join hands to nurture nature, protect our forests, and enrich our environment. Together, we can preserve the pristine natural heritage of Arunachal Pradesh and build a cleaner, greener, healthier, and more resilient future for all," the Governor appealed.
